Skilled Worker eligible occupations

The sponsor must find the appropriate SOC code for the part in order to decide whether the position qualifies for the Skilled Worker route. The ONS occupation coding application is typically used for this. The role that is filled should be described in the list's job description.

To confirm that the code is available and comes under the Skilled Worker route, it must be cross-referenced with the list of jobs that meet the requirements. If the wrong SOC number is used, the Home Office may reject the skilled worker visa uk application.

Skilled Worker minimum salary requirement

The general minimum salary requirement for skilled worker visas is £26,200 per year, unless the "going rate" for the specific position is higher. Every occupational code has been given a going rate. The salary amount must be determined hourly instead of just annually. Even if the yearly salary is more than what is required, the minimum hourly salary cannot be less than £10.10.

Even though a minimum salary of £20,480 must still be met, the salary requirement for new hires is 30% lower than the rate for experienced workers in any profession. Furthermore, there are various minimum salary requirements for employees in specific health or education professions.

Unless they have already demonstrated their English language proficiency as part of a prior UK immigration application or if they're a citizen of one of several exempt countries, most applicants for a skilled worker visa will need to show that they meet the language requirement.

The following countries are exempted from the English language requirement for applicants:
